CHARLES-TOWN.

The Remainder of the Tranſactions between this Government and the Creek Indians, on the 2d of June, (begun in our laſt.)

Then the HEAD WARRIOR of the Oakfuſkee's, called the Handſome Fellow, roſe up, and deſired to be heard a few Words, viz.

WE hope that the abatement of all the articles requeſted will be agreed to, for I do not know what we have done, that we ſhould not have as much favor ſhewn us as to the Cherokee's, and that we ſhould not have our goods as cheap as they, tho' the abatement that we have deſired will not reduce them near ſo low as the Cherokee's; but if we had this abatement we ſhould have ſome good news to tell our people when we go home, which would lighten their hearts and make them merry, and would cement and finiſh all the good talks we have had with your excellency.

GOVERNOR. I have already told you, that I have examined the traders that carry goods to your nation; I have alſo aſked the merchants that ſupply them with thoſe goods, if the abatement that your deſire could poſſibly be granted; I have alſo conſulted with my beloved men about it; and they all agree, that it cannot be done. I have acquainted you with the conſequences of your perſiſting in having them lowered, that the traders would not be able to pay the merchants, and that the merchants would not truſt the traders with any more goods, and that you would be left without trader or goods amongſt you. I have informed you, that the goods are their own, and that I have no power to compell them to give them away, or part with them, at your prices; and that it would be unjuſt in me, if I had ſuch a power, to make uſe

You have taken notice, that the trade in the Cherokee's is lower than in your nation, but you have not conſidered, that the Cherokee leather is better than yours, it is much thicker and fetches a better price at market; beſides, it is not near ſo far to the Cherokee's as it is to your nation, your traders have many rivers to croſs, where they are detained ſometimes days, nay weeks: All this you know very well, and that they not only ſuffer the loſs of time, but often ſuſtain great damage both in the goods they carry up, and in the leather they bring down.—When you maturely conſider of theſe things, you will clearly ſee, that the trade in your nation cannot be ſo low as in the Cherokee's; but as there is now a proſpect of peace, you will be able to hunt in ſafety, and will conſequently kill more ſkins, and will be better able to pay a price for your goods, than you were in time of war.

The Captain of the Oakfuſkee's then roſe up and ſaid,

I have been honoured with a commiſſion from your excellency, and have endeavoured to do my duty, and diſcharge the Truſt repoſed in me; and ſince the peace with the Cherokee's was propoſed, I have kept my warriors at home, notwithſtanding we have loſt many of our friends, by which means I have got the ill-will of many of my people. My intentions have been always good to ſerve the Engliſh, but I have been unlucky; ſome accident or other always diſappoints my endeavours; I therefore wiſh your excellency would be pleaſed to appoint ſome other in my place, who may be more deſerving and may have better ſucceſs. I hope your excellency does not imagine that I undervalue your commiſſion; but my ill-luck diſcourages me. All your excellency's intentions are for our good; however, I ſhall always do the Engliſh all the ſervice in my power.

Here many of the Warriors went out of the Room ſeemingly diſpleaſed, and left their Preſents behind.

GOVERNOR. I am very ſenſible that you have been a true friend to the Engliſh, and are very well deſerving and worthy of your commiſſion: As to the bad luck that you complain of, I hope you may be more ſucceſsful for the future, but it is in no man's power to command ſucceſs. However I ſhall not eſteem you the leſs upon that account, and I deſire that you will keep your commiſſion.

The Captain immediately went out of the Room, leaving the Commiſſion upon the Table, and laying down the Preſent of Clouths, &c. that had been delivered to him.

The WOLF King roſe up and ſaid,

No wonder that the traders cannot afford to ſell their goods at the prices we deſire, when they give away ſuch quantities to their wives and women which they keep: This is the true reaſon, but we hope they ſhall not make uſe of goods for ſuch purpoſes any more.

After this ſeveral of the other Warriors and young Men left the Room, without taking any of the Preſents with them, and making ſome Noiſe as they went out.

MALATCHI. I am heartily ſorry, that ſome of our people, who call themſelves headmen and warriors, ſhould behave ſo like children, but they are unacquainted with the nature of public buſineſs and the true intereſt of their own nation; they ought therefore to be conſidered as children, and no regard at all paid to any thing they have ſaid: They in a very rude and abrupt manner broke in upon my diſcourſe, without any power or commiſſion from me or the nation. But the ſeveral matters that have been talked over and agreed upon betwixt your excellency and me, ſhall ſtand; it is the only true talk, and ſhall be ratified and confirmed; every thing elſe is to be conſidered as wind.

A Part is here omitted, relating to what has been omitted before; and another Part, not thought very

[illegible]

These preſents are ſent from his majeſty the great King George, to be diſtributed to ſuch Indians as are in friendſhip with his ſubjects of this and the neighbouring province of Georgia, and behave well towards them; but the behavior of ſome of your people, upon this occaſion, has been very extraordinary: They ſeem to ſhew very little regard for his majeſty's preſents, and thereby have rendered themſelves unworthy of his paternal love, and little deſerving of ſuch tokens of his royal favour; however, as your prudence, good conduct, and good ſenſe, and ſome other of the headmen's, have been ſo very remarkable, not only upon the preſent occaſion, but at other times, and during this whole tranſaction, I ſhall order the preſents to your lodgings if you deſire it, that you may diſtribute them to thoſe that you ſhall think moſt worthy of them.

This was accordingly done.

On the 4th of June, (the Indians having that Morning ſent a preſſing Meſſage to the Governor, praying that they might be permitted to ſpeak once more with him and the Beloved Men) the following Conferences paſſed.

GOVERNOR.

YOU muſt be very ſenſible, that ever ſince your arrival, every moment of my time has been employed in what concerns you; and you certainly know, that beſides Indian affairs, I have other matters of conſequence to tranſact; neither can you be ignorant, that beſides you, there are many other Indians to be minded. I deſire therefore, that if any thing has been omitted, it may be now finiſhed: Tho' in my opinion there was nothing but what was ſettled at our laſt meeting. It is true, that the behavior of ſome of your people at that meeting was rude and unmannerly; I want therefore to know what they have to ſay for it.

MALATCHI. All public matters have indeed been fully diſcourſed of, and what has been ſaid upon thoſe heads, has made a very deep impreſſion upon us: We are ſenſible, that every thing that has been ſaid or done tends to our good, and it appears plainly, that your excellency, like a true father, has our welfare and good very much at heart; but children do not always ſee and underſtand their own good, but are ſometimes guilty of little miſtakes and faults, and we hope upon the preſent occaſion, your excellency will look upon them as the faults of children; and like a good father, you will forgive them, as the faults of your children.

Our people have frequently met in this houſe; it has been a practice of an old ſtanding, to come hither to ſee our friends the Engliſh, and to renew our treaties with them, and that was the occaſion of our coming at this time; and after every thing had been fully ſettled, and all public buſineſs concluded, a ſmall matter happened by the indiſcretion of ſome of our people, for which we are heartily ſorry: We are afraid it has given offence, but hope his excellency will forgive them.

All matters of a public concern, or of any conſequence, have been ſo fully diſcuſſed, that there remains nothing further to be ſaid or done on thoſe heads: And as to that little inadvertency which I now mentioned, I hope it will not be conſidered as any part of the tranſactions between us, but as an incident not to be noticed, for there was not the leaſt deſign to give offence, and as it was purely accidental, I hope it will be paſt over.

GOVERNOR, to Interpreter. Tell them, that their king's behavior has been extreamly good ever ſince he came down, and upon other occaſions, he behaves as becomes a king; and had he not been born a king, he deſerves to have been made one—the head king of the nation—and happy is that nation who has ſuch a head; for by his prudence, he is capable of conducting their affairs happily in time of peace, and by his valor, he is able to defend them from their enemies in time of war, and to lead them out to certain victory, as they all know he has frequently done.

It gives me great pleaſure, to ſee that many of the mit them; thus, inſtead of acting like headmen, the guides and rulers, they degrade themſelves, and put the people in their place.

There are I know many good and wiſe men in their nation; and tho' the Gun-Merchant be not here, yet I am well acquainted with him, that is his character; he is truly a great man; and therefore, for the future, when I ſend for any of the headmen of your nation, or when your nation has any public buſineſs to communicate or tranſact with me, I deſire that you will previouſly conſult among yourſelves, and concert what you have to ſay, and agree upon a proper perſon to be your mouth, and impower him to ſpeak and treat fully upon that affair. Malatchi will be always a proper perſon, or the Gun-Merchant may be commiſſioned from the upper towns, and what they ſhall judge proper to ſay, may be fit for me to hear: But it is below the dignity of this government, to permit your common people, to talk over their own private affairs at ſuch meetings, as ſeveral of them pretended to do the other night.

Indian CHIEF. I acknowledge myſelf to have been in a fault, and I hope you will have the goodneſs to forgive what is paſt: I am heartily ſorry for what I did, it was an error: But I look upon your excellency as a father, ſo I hope you will forgive me.

Another Indian CHIEF. I was in hopes that that old man (pointing to the Red-coat king) would have ſpoke to the matter, and have made an apology for us all; but as he has not, I beg leave to ſpeak a few words, I ſhall not be long. The people of the upper towns, the Talapooſee's, are chiefly to blame for what happened the other night, and for which they are all very ſorry: They acknowledge it was a great fault, as it was before the governor; but I hope he will forget it, and think no more of it: It was but an inadvertent word, and I cannot compare it to any thing but a ſudden guſt of wind, which ſoon is ſpent, and gone, and blown away; and therefore I hope that this ſlip, which was but a ſlip of the tongue only, will be forgot, ſince all our hearts are ſtrait.

The governor has been pleaſed to mention the Gun-merchant; it is true, the upper towns look upon him as their headman: Malatchi is the head of all the lower nation; and we intended that he ſhould ſpeak for us all.

It is well known, that ever ſince the governor put any

any confidence in me, and gave me a commiſſion, I have endeavoured to behave well, and ſuitable to the truſt repoſed in me, and I will always continue to do ſo, and hope, that the little fault that has been committed will be overlooked.

GOVERNOR. I know him to be an honeſt, good, and worthy man, and that he is a great man in his own nation; this conſiſts with my own knowledge: I am well acquainted with him, for he has been often here to ſee me; and this is the conſtant character that all the traders in general give of him, that he is a good man, and a firm friend to the Engliſh, and whatever happened the other day ſhall never more be thought of.

Oakfuſkee CAPT. When I was laſt here, I deſired to reſign the commiſſion which I had from your excellency, but I was diſturbed by our people, and could not expreſs myſelf, ſo that neither his excellency, the beloved men, nor the men writing could hear what I ſaid: It was out of no diſreſpect to the governor or beloved men, that I laid down my commiſſion, but ever ſince I had it, every thing has gone againſt me; I have loſt ſeveral of my people by the enemy, and I have no luck; this is the only reaſon why I gave it back.

GOVERNOR. I always heard a good character of you, and good men are ſometimes unlucky; but fortune may change: I told you before, that it is in no man's power to command ſucceſs, I hope therefore you will take back your commiſſion, and continue to be, as you have hitherto been, a good friend to the Engliſh.

Oakfuſkee CAPT. It is true, among us, when a beloved man or a warrior gets a name, it always remains with him, and I look upon your commiſſion to be of the ſame nature; when your excellency gives a commiſſion, I ſuppoſe you intend that it ſhould always continue: As for my behavior, it ſhall always be the ſame; I therefore take back my commiſſion, and ſhall continue a true friend to the Engliſh until the day of my death.

Another CHIEF I came from the town Tuckebatchee: I am ſent by the headman of that town, but I am a ſtranger here myſelf: I never ſaw your excellency before; and tho' this is the firſt time I have been here, the Tuckebatchee people have been many years ago well known in this place, and they have been known for good men and brave warriors: I am now come in their room, but very unworthy to ſupply their place.

GOVERNOR. I know the Tuckebatchee town has produced many brave and good men, old Bracket has been always eſteemed ſo; and I think you are a very [illegible] be old, the Engliſh do not neglect their friends, I therefore cauſed a preſent of cloaths to be prepared for him, which I beg the favor of you to carry up.

I hope you will all conſider his majeſty's love and goodneſs to his friends the Indians, in ſending you ſuch preſents; I hope you will conſider the care we take conſtantly to ſend traders amongſt you, to ſupply you with goods; the pains we are at in making peace between you and your neighbours; the good uſage and kind reception you meet with when you come down; we have therefore reaſon to hope, that you will behave always as friends to the Engliſh: But I am ſorry to hear, that ſome of you are apt to forget theſe favors, and go too often to viſit the French; and I am informed, that an invitation has lately been ſent from Moville, deſiring you all to come there, but I flatter myſelf that none here preſent will go. Every thing is now finiſhed, and there remains nothing for me to ſay, but that the preſents that have been given you, are ſent from the great King George, to be by me diſtributed to his friends the Indians, contiguous to, and in alliance with this and the neighbouring province of Georgia; and I wiſh you all ſafe home to your own country.

In March laſt, the affair between the parliament and clergy of France had not abated of the heat with which it was carried on. The former daily ſummoned before them and proſecuted ſuch eccleſiaſtics as refuſed the ſacraments, and even ſummoned the biſhop of Orleans, on account of freſh complaints, and the 3 ſuperiors of the Hôtel Dieu. To put a ſtop to theſe vigorous proceedings, the king iſſued his letter de cachet and an arret, commanding it to be regiſtered; which however, the parliament had courage eno' to decline, and reſolved upon remonſtrating againſt it.

In April, the parliaments continued firmly to adhere to their ſyſtem, and ſome of the members of that of Paris proteſted that they would rather die than abandon it, as the view of the clergy was to introduce the inquiſition amongſt them: They continued their proceedings againſt ſuch prieſts as had reſumed their functions by virtue of arrets of the council of ſtate; and complaint having been made, that the biſhop of Amiens had ſent the Jacobins a threatening letter, for having regiſtered ſeveral arrets of parliament, & enjoining them to eraſe the ſaid regiſtry, theſe patriots ordered the ſaid curate into cuſtody, and that the Jacobins be compell'd to lay the biſhop's letter before them. On the other ſide, the council of ſtate continued publiſhing arrets annulling the regiſtry of the parliament's arrets.

Paris, April 30. The parliament's remonſtrances, to which the king has promiſed an anſwer on the 2d of May, are penned with ſpirit, if we may judge from the laſt article, which is expreſſed in theſe terms: 'If 'thoſe who abuſe the confidence your majeſty places 'in them, ſhould endeavour to reduce us to the cruel 'alternative, of failing in the diſcharge of our duty, 'or incurring your diſpleaſure, we frankly declare, 'that our zeal knows no bounds, and that we have 'the courage to become victims to our fidelity.'

Paris A-la-main, May 7. The premier preſident of the parliament, accompanied by two others, went to Verſailles on the day appointed, in order to have the king's anſwer to the parliament's remonſtrances. His majeſty having obſerved to them, that the remonſtrances which were preſented to him contained nothing but the articles on which he had clearly explained himſelf, that therefore he had no other anſwer to make than what he had made. Whereupon the preſidents [illegible] nt thereof to the chamb[illegible] tion, and drew up a reſol[illegible] 'That ſo long as 'evil[illegible] truth from pene'tra[illegible] rs would remain 'aff[illegible] all other proceedings.' The chatelet has likewiſe ſuſpended its functions.

Paris, May 7. The king being informed that his parliament, in conſequence of the arret of the 4th, had ſuſpended all affairs, and that their example had been followed by the members of the chatelet (to the very great embaraſment of the public) his majeſty held yeſterday a grand council at Verſailles, wherein he took a reſolution which is to be communicated this day to the parliament.

Laſt Friday the Brigt. William, John Hunt Maſter, from London, put into Bull's-Iſland Inlet, not being able to reach this Port on Account of the S.W. Winds that have blown pretty freſh for a Fortnight together, and ſtill continue; but a Boat having been ſent to fetch up the Letters, they came to Town Yeſterday Evening. —— By this Veſſel we have Papers to the 26*th of* May, from which we have taken the following freſh Advices.

LONDON, May 19.

WE hear from Southwold, that the herring-fiſhery fleet are to ſail next week to their fiſhing ſtation off Shetland; to protect which the lords of the admiralty have ordered 2 20-gun ſhips and a ſloop, to ſail to the northward.

Paris A-la-main, May 11. On the 5th the king ſent his letters patent to the parliament importing, that his majeſty having been informed that they had not obeyed the orders he ſent the day before, but had come to a reſolution to diſcontinue the uſual courſe of juſtice, and employed themſelves in buſineſs which his majeſty had ordered them to drop; and his majeſty being willing to put a ſtop to proceedings ſo derogatory to his authority, and prejudicial to his ſubjects, hath ſent theſe his letters patent, ordering them to proceed immediately to the regiſtry of the letters patent of the 22d of February laſt, without farther orders, and likewiſe commanding them to continue their buſineſs without delay, on pain of incurring his majeſty's diſpleaſure; and this without any regard to their former reſolutions to the contrary, which his majeſty annuls and makes void by theſe preſents, which he alſo orders to be read, publiſhed and regiſtered.

In conſequence of the above, the parliament on the 7th came to the following reſolution: 'That having 'conſidered the letters patent of the 5th inſtant, and 'perſiſting in their reſolution of the ſame day, reſol'ved, that they could not, without a breach of their 'duty and their oath, obey the ſaid letters patent.' Hereupon his majeſty iſſued letters de cachet for baniſhing all the members of parliament, ſo that excepting the great chamber, the whole parliament is baniſhed, and each member ſent to a different place. They were allowed but 24 hours to leave Paris, and during that time were not permitted to go out of doors. Four only have been ſent away, viz. M. l'abbé de Chauvelin to mount St. Michael; M. le preſident de Mazy to the iſland of St. Margueritte; M. du Lys to Pierre-Anciſe; and M. de Beſſigny to the caſtle of Ham in Normandy.

Paris A-la-main, May 14. On the 9th inſtant, the premier preſident made the following ſpeech in the great chamber. —— 'Gentlemen, in what 'light can you look upon the exception which the 'king has been pleaſed to make of us? Could his 'majeſty imagine we ſhould be leſs ſtedfaſt than our 'brethren to the oath of fidelity which we have taken 'to him? For my part, gentlemen, I can only look 'upon it as an injury done to your zeal, which, ſo 'far from departing from, I think, you ſhould inviolably perſiſt in, and abide by the reſolutions of the '5th and 7th inſtant. And further, gentlemen, what 'gives me the greateſt affliction upon this occaſion is, 'to think that I am not at the head of our brethren, 'to partake of their ſufferings.'

The ſame day the great chamber, after deliberation upon the above diſcourſe of the preſident's, reſolve to abide by the reſolutions of the 5th and 7th inſtan After which they informed the attorney-general, th the ſacraments had been refuſed at the Hôtel Dieu Paris, in conſequence of which the curate and vic d'Amboiſe, and a curate of Chartres were taken in cuſtody.

The 12th inſtant, at 5 o'clock in the morning, th premier preſident, and the reſt of the members of th great chamber, received letters de cachet for baniſh ing them all together to Pontoiſe within 48 hours but they continue aſſembled, in order to conſider the complaints which are laid before them of the refuſal of the ſacraments, all other affairs ſubſiding.

Hague, May 18. According to private letters fro Paris, the letters de cachet were brought the night the 9th inſtant, by mouſquetaires to all the preſiden and counſellors of inqueſts and requeſts, to the number of 180, ſignifying to them the places of their exil 20 are ordered to Bourges, ſome to Poitiers, and othe to Auvergne. M. de Lys, the preſident de Maz the preſident de Beſſigny, and the famous Abbé Chauvelin, had only three quarters of an hour notic The goal of mont St. Michael was intended for th laſt; but one of his friends repreſenting to the kin the bad ſtate of his health, obtained that he ſhould b ſent to St. Omers. Their departure cauſed a gre commotion in Paris on the 10th. The people flock to ſee them paſs, and expreſſed in the moſt affectiona terms the part they took in what happened to ther and in the cauſe of their exile.

London, May 24. Yeſterday a council was held Kenſington on ſome very intereſting affairs, at whi were preſent the principal officers of ſtate; and ſo after two meſſengers were diſpatched, one to the cou of Vienna, the other to that of Berlin.

According to private letters, there are very gre commotions, not only in Paris, but many other pl ces, on account of the baniſhment of the members that parliament.

CHARLES-TOWN, Auguſt 6.

A LARGE convenient brick Store to be lett. Inquire of William Burrows.

TO BE SOLD, a Plantation or tract of land known by the name of Tomotly Savannah, in Prince William Pariſh, Granville County, containing 906 acres of good land, well ſituated on a ſpacious ſavannah, near and at equal diſtance between the church and meeting houſe, in view of two high roads, and not far from a landing, with a good high-road leading thereto; it affords rice land enough to employ 70 working hands, without clearing any back ſwamp, is very fit for two compleat ſettlements, and the whole may be laid under water when any part thereof is 12 feet deep: There is, about 100 acres now under convenient ditches, to ſtop and convey the water from the great reſervoir into any part of the field, whereſoever it may be required; a large dam, 26 feet foundation, 630 feet long, and high enough to reſerve water for the whole ſpot of rice land, and to work a pounding mill in the winter; a good large dwelling houſe, with a piazza, hall and ſix rooms, all well finiſhed; a garden at the ſouth front, and yard lately paled in; a new kitchen and dairy; a brick chimney with two fire-places and an oven; a brick well with a pump; a large barn 45 feet by 24, with two floors; and other out-houſes, &c. And there will ſhortly be laid open a proſpective view of Sheldon (the preſent ſeat of the hon. Lieut Governor Bull) and of the new brick church (which, from its elegance, is juſtly eſteemed the compleateſt piece of building in any country pariſh in this province:) I ſay, a proſpective view of theſe, and of the 3 ſettlements on the oppoſite ſide of the ſavannah (which appear like ſo many ſmall villages) with their rice fields before them, together exhibit ſo delightful a ſcene, that the ſight is raviſhed and the mind charmed therewith: I may ſafely add, that, to a man of taſte, there is no place in this province can be improved, with leſs expence or labor, to better advantage, for pleaſure and profit. If the purchaſer be inclined, he may have immediate poſſeſſion, as I will alſo diſpoſe of the crop on 60 odd acres there. Treat with Mr. Andrew Deveaux ſen. at his plantation on Aſhley-River, who is impowered by me to act in my abſence.
